

RYANAIR FIRST SERBIA FLIGHTS ANNOUNCED

News / Airports / Routes

Ryanair, Europe's favourite low fares airline, today (20 April) announced its first Serbia flights, with a new route from Nis to Berlin commencing on 4 September, with a twice weekly service which will deliver 30,000 customers p.a. at Nis Airport.

Ryanair's Serbian operations will deliver:

- 1 new route to Berlin (2 x weekly – Thursday & Sunday)
- 2 weekly return flights to/from Nis Airport
- 30,000 customers p.a.

Ryanair is glad to enter the Serbian market and looks forward to growing Serbian tourism, traffic and jobs.

Serbian consumers and visitors can now fly Ryanair from Nis to Berlin and look forward to further improvements, as Ryanair continues its “Always Getting Better” programme, which includes more new routes, new digital features, new cabin interiors and more low fares.

Ryanair celebrated announcing its new Nis to Berlin route by releasing seats for sale at prices starting from €24.99 for travel in September to November. These low fare seats are available for booking on the Ryanair.com website until midnight Wednesday (27 April).

Ryanair’s Chiara Ravara said:

“Ryanair is pleased to announce our entry into the Serbian market from September 2016, our 32nd country, with one new route to Berlin Schönefeld which will deliver 30,000 customers annually.

Serbian customers can look forward to Ryanair service improvements in the coming months, including new aircraft interiors, new uniforms and more new routes, under our “Always Getting Better” programme, as we continue to offer so much more than just the lowest fares.

To celebrate our new route we are releasing seats from Nis to Berlin from €24.99 for travel in September to November, which are available for booking from tomorrow until midnight Wednesday (27 April). Since these amazing low fares will be snapped up quickly, customers should log onto www.ryanair.com and avoid missing out.”
